THE VALUE OF A TEAR.

BY W. LAMONT.

Have you rest the grand old story ?" The old man said as he smiled, smile in its parity smaple.

Have you read how the Lord, our Saylor, When here on this earth below, Was mocked, and jested, and suffered All the phases of human wor?"

That when to the cross they naited Hint.

He proyed, "O! Father, borgere them For they know not what they do!" And a tear on the old man's holies. Trembled a while, and fell,

'My child, you will fret and matter At the crosses you have to wear, still thinking your tiny troubles That your sorrows are even greater

But an angel caught the teardrop; And the good Lord said, "Tis well.
